400,947 WERE TO SEE TIGERS MAUL KANSAS

Mammoth Forty-Five Mile Parade Proves Thriller For Visitors Who Then Stampede Toward Rollins Field.

Four hundred thousand, nine hundred and twenty-seven Jayhawkers and 2 persons from the University to Kansas arrived in Columbia today. Some three in by street car while most of the others walked down from the Jayhawk road.

For many millions of miles have these misadventurous journeymen to the scene of education to view with their own eyes the humbling of the high-flying eleven Jayhawkers who carry the Kansas colors. But they are the victims of this slaughter destined to occur on Rollins Field. For how could they see of the fighting Tiger's ravens' banner and their soaring hopes as to be such a number with the ripping of the Jayhawk's tall feathers, to flutter down in the measure depths of deplorable defeat. Blood stained feathers of blue will mark the place where the proud Jayhawk once fought, all in vain.

The vanguard arrived yesterday morning, and since then the numbers have increased hourly, until this morning every road was crowded to the limit with vehicles of every description, carrying worshippers to our fair village. Even the stage-coaches were loaded to the rods, the Vash-Kasee and Katherine lines running in expectancy and sometimes less than one hour late.

Consuming a light breakfast consisting mostly of excitement and one at the wonderful sights in our city, the visitors then adjourned to the sidewalks along College avenue and Broadway where they waited the coming of the great parade. The police force was in govern the unruly multitudes that jammed the highways at Rollins Field. All of them worked throughout the early morning, perching on the shoulders of the parade. The parade began at 10 o'clock and ended at 10:45 from Rollins and College. The blare of the instruments of the R. O. T. C. Band reached the expectant crowds, and a moment later the band appeared, followed by more than 45 miles of floats and marching students. The fight was on! The full roster of the military unit marched in regular columns, and even a more full roster of students followed in a number of bands, each profusely decorated with Tiger color and bearing striking characteristics of that particular school or foot.

The Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., G.A.A. and all of the like student organizations were represented by floats. More than a score of county clubs, members of the Ad Club, were advertising the wares of their respective and perhaps respectable counties by floats and cars filled with students from their particular neck of the

POOL IS CLOSED

Girls Adjourn to Cold Cream Habit for the Winter.

It has long been supposed that rouge and powder have supplanted soap and water in the toilet of the modern Campus but only recently was the fact brought to light beyond peradventure of a doubt.

The pool at Christian College has been closed. Cause: Lack of interest.

It is also said that until some signs of demand are displayed, the pool will remain as dry as any other once familiar containers.

There is no chance, then, of the pool being put into use before spring. Why? Well,

But, one would suppose that the closing of the pool would involve more than just the face. Do the girls take a bath during the winter? Will there, after all, be a demand for the pool before spring.

Suppose you find out.

COPS FIND STILL AT G. G. K. HOUSE

Maid Made at 3 A. M. After Visitors Had Left.

TO GIVE BOND

The Powerful Jake Has a 1,000 Per Cent Kick.

Rumors current in this city for several weeks have been confirmed, and suspicious shared by practically the entire population are now proved true. A still with a capacity of 200 gallons of 1,000 percent-powerful Jake was discovered in the cellar of the Gamma Gamma Kappa House at 3 o'clock this morning. Just ten minutes after the last visitor had completed a lingering and excessively drowsy good-night on the street car platform which serves as a front porch. The crime squad of Chief Sidelight's valiant force accomplished the raid which has resulted in an exposure of what apparently is the most elaborate rate and complete jacking in Columbia. The expedition of the raiding force was rendered all the more hazardous by the fact that every member of the cellar gang, who acted as guards for the nefarious distillery, was lit up in the thorough-going manner of a country chapel. After positively denying to the officers the presence of a still, and attempting to exonerate the easily discernable odor by saying the Gamma house always smelled like that, the cellar gang attacked the officers with the fury of enraged English sparrows.

They were overpowered only after a desperate struggle, in the course of which the sisters who are forever to be on the second floor on account of the small size of the cellar were aroused. What might have developed into the armed resistance of the entire sorority was averted by one of the girls, who quieted her conspirators in the distillery plot by declaring the police would never be able to find anything on them anyway. But the sleuths, once given free access to the remote regions of the cellar, quickly located the still. It had been constructed, as a precautionary measure, on the side of the house farthest removed from the Alpha Tau Omega boarding club.

When the exultant cries of the triumphant bulls announced the discovery of the illegal apparatus, six Kappas promptly fainted. One fell in the arms of a representative of Peerade Xtra, who accompanied the officers on the raid. The reporter's hands were fearfully scratched by her elbow.

Structure of new showed signs of reviving, this sympathetic journalist whispered into her boldly uncovered ear some words calculated to avert the disturbance of police court proceedings.

"My Gawd," she shrieked, "It ain't that! How kin we live wid-out our Jake? We serves it at de mornin' meal, an' it's our only string to hold de men wid."

After hearing this disheartening report from the man who fires the furnaces at the Kansas camp, the news hound chased himself to Johnny Miller's backyard where the coach was busy splitting kindling for Mrs. Miller.

"We lost the valley championship this year, I guess, but we should not have done it," the Missouri mentor said. "Any way it's done now, and every man of us—coaches as well as players—will find consolation only in again defeating our friends from the West. Kansas has a good team. Missouri has a better team, and we're ready to show you. When the game is over tomorrow afternoon there will be so many Jayhawk feathers on Rollins Field the crowd will not be able to cut across the grid-iron enroute to the gates."

READY TO OPEN A NEW CABARET

At Wives of Omar Spur Mills to Sing and Shake.

HOME REMODELED

No Instructions to Be Allowed Unless Chaperooned.

The Co-op Cabaret will be opened next Monday night in the house of Asquith Hall by President Phil in an effort to provide the students a social center in which to dissipate. Special entertainment has been provided for the occasion by the arrival this morning of Omar Spur Mills and his thirty-one wives from Turkey. They will introduce the latest harmonious styles and dramatic dances.

The dance is now being remodelled to accommodate the large number who will be required to take this part of the citizenship course. The glass is being removed from the windows in order to facilitate disposing of homebrew bottles and overworked cleaning girls.

A large dancing floor is being laid in the center, around which booths are being installed. The seats are to be heavily upholstered and each table has a fanet which is directly connected to a still in the music department.

A sixteen-inch cylinder, wire-wheeled elevator of the Early Victorian style will be used to carry passengers up, and two brass poles with polished joints will take care of the downward traffic. The art department will point the food upon the china. They announce that popular post-war profiteering will prevail.

The quadruped orchestra will furnish music from 10 p. m. to 4 a. m., at which time the lights will be knocked out. Double-jointed instruments will be used and self-striding whinny rags are promised the devotees of shoulder-shaking calisthenics.

No faculty members will be admitted unless in the company of a student who is taking a course under
